Recipients of Queen's Platinum Jubilee pins honoured and celebrated by Halton Healthcare Hospital Foundations

Halton Healthcare volunteers, staff and physicians who were honoured with Queen's Platinum Jubilee pins were celebrated at a small reception on October 13, recognizing their significant contributions and service to their community.

The Canadian Platinum Jubilee pin was created to mark the 70th anniversary year of the late Queen Elizabeth II's accession to the throne.

Halton Healthcare and the three foundations, Georgetown Hospital Foundation, Milton District Hospital Foundation, Oakville Hospital Foundation, along with hospital and foundation board members, were in attendance to extend their heartfelt thanks and congratulations to the 26 Halton recipients who work in service to Halton Healthcare.

"Each person presented with this honour represents the excellence and perseverance of our healthcare system," said Sandra Taylor, Executive Director, Georgetown Hospital Foundation. "Through the challenges we've faced the past few years, these individuals have continued to support our hospital and our community. We owe them immense gratitude."

These recipients personify service and duty, and were nominated for their important contributions to the Halton community.

Listed below are the recipients:

Cindy McDonell, Senior VP Clinical Operations

Joan Jickling, Senior Vice President, Patient Engagement and Chief Nursing Officer

Letitia McDougall, Director, Quality and Patient Relations

Dr. Craig Carson, Associate Chief of Staff

Mandy Armstrong, Chair, Georgetown Hospital Foundation Board of Directors

Heather Kaufman, former Chair, Georgetown Hospital Foundation Board of Directors
